

VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES AVAILABLE!

Virginia Tech's Appalachian Food Project Team is engaging students to map food systems in the Central Appalachia Region. This opportunity will enhance students' research skills, build work experience, and increase their overall knowledge of local food systems. Each session's date and time will be updated weekly on our Local Wiki Page: Virginia Tech AFP Volunteer. If you have any questions or concerns please contact Caylin Stewart at caylin96@vt.edu.

About The Project

The Appalachian Foodshed Project (AFP) is funded by a 5 year USDA Food Security Grant. Coordinated by an interdisciplinary team of researchers at Virginia Tech, North Carolina State University, and West Virginia University, the project envisions A place-based food system that is resilient, accessible, affordable, and healthy for Appalachian communities.

United States Department of Agriculture
National Institute of Food and Agriculture